

BEING CARED FOR BY THE ANIMAL RESCUE LEAGUE.

LITTLE GRAY CAT
SAVED FROM DEATH

AN EXAMPLE OF THE WORK DONE BY RESCUE LEAGUE

Organization Formed to Care for Helpless Animals—Miss Mary
E. Coursey in Charge.

A little gray cat tried to nourish two kittens more dead than alive, lying beside her. The little gray cat was starving, was little more than skin and bones. She was lying in a shed in the back yard of a residence in the northwest section of Washington. A week before she had been sleek and well fed, proud of her family. But the occupants of the house, her owners, had suddenly been compelled to move away, leaving the city. The little gray cat was forgotten in the hurry. For a week she had waited for her mistress or the cook to bring her dinner. She had prowled around the vacant back yard and peered at the closed windows and doors. No one came, and the cat starved and with her starved her kittens. Finally the cat stopped licking the kittens. It seemed to be the end. But the back gate was thrust open and a man carrying a basket hurried in. He was looking for the cats and, finding them, quickly transferred the whole family, dead and alive, to his basket and set off.

The man was the assistant agent of the Washington Animal Rescue League, with headquarters at 1555 Ohio avenue northwest. A phone message from a householder near the shed where the little gray cat was lying, who had heard the pleading of the mother and weaker and weaker, had told the agent that a cat was in distress and needed aid. The little gray cat was brought to the home of the rescue league and brought back to life by careful feeding, but her two kittens were chafed and formed, since it was impossible to save them.

Sample of Rescue Work.
This is only a single sample of the work which the Washington Animal Rescue League is doing daily. Dumb animals of all kinds in distress are cured for or put out of their misery in a humane manner. The rescue will take charge of a dying horse, a wounded cat or a starving dog if it is notified by phone or by mail.

The league is only ten months old, but in that time it has cared for more than 2,500 cats, for more than 200 dogs and has aided other animals, including horses.

When it was first started here, last June, the league was located in the northeast section of the city, but its present home is more centrally located, and the members of the league expect that its field of usefulness will be greatly increased. The home of the league is a kind of animal emergency hospital, where rescued cats, dogs and horses will be cared for temporarily. Good homes will be found for these animals, or they will be mercifully put to death.

The work already done by the league shows how much such an institution was needed in the National Capital. The league works in the humane way, it can, with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. But it goes beyond the work of humane societies, and provides a temporary home for waifs and strays of the animal world, or puts them at the work of humane societies. Of course, it would be impossible for the league to care permanently for even a considerable number of the great number of animals which it aids. Consequently, when it is found that a homeless animal is in need of homes for the cats and dogs, or when the cats and dogs are badly injured, they are chloroformed.

Boston in the Lead.
Boston stands out pre-eminently among American cities in its care for dumb animals. There the Animal Rescue League does the greatest work, and its last annual report shows that 36,235 animals and birds were received and cared for during twelve months. And the Animal Rescue League here is patterning its work largely after that of the Boston organization.

Miss Coursey said that all that was needed was to bring home to the people the fact that there was an institution in the city which is ready and anxious to look after suffering and abandoned animals.

Relates an Incident.
"Up in Boston, while I was there, a firm moved from its building on a prominent business street. The next day there was a cat in the big window of the deserted store. It looked as though the cat had been forgotten and left shut up in the building. Within an hour we had nineteen calls from various persons, asking us to remove the cat. Think of that, nineteen persons who had passed by the store and thought of the poor cat! That is the kind of spirit which the league hopes to develop in Washington. We are particularly anxious to get the children interested in the work of rescuing the dumb animals from suffering."

This spring Boston has seen the dedication of the Angel Memorial Animal Hospital. It is a magnificent building in memory of the man who dedicated his life to reducing the amount of suffering among dumb animals. The late George T. Angell began his work more than half a century ago. He organized the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the American Humane Education Society.

The Angel Memorial Hospital is complete in every way, and a unique institution. It has its ambulances sent to bring in horses, cats, dogs and other animals; it has its operating rooms where the animals in need of surgical treatment can be operated upon after an anesthetic has been administered. There are regular wards for horses, dogs and cats. On the roof are runs for the small animals where they may exercise.

Officers of Local League.
The Washington Animal Rescue League was founded by men and women prominent in the social life of the capital, who have taken a keen interest in the matter of aiding the animals. Mrs. Seth M. Ackley is the president of the league. The other officers of the league are: First vice president, Arthur D. Addison; vice president, Rev. C. Ernest Smith; Mr. Ross Perry; Mr. John R. McLean; Mr. Ben Johnson; Mr. William S. Stoughton; Mr. Charles Boughton Wood; Mrs. James E. Martine; secretary, Mrs. F. E. Smith; treasurer, Mrs. S. J. Stoughton; directors, Mrs. George Becker, Miss Martha C. Codman, Miss Lydia S. Bidwell, Mrs. Nancy Johnson, Mrs. William A. Slater, Mrs. Thomas F. Bayard, Mrs. A. P. Gordon Cumming, Miss Hussein Bernberg, Mrs. Merton Twogood.

Miss Coursey, the agent in charge of the league's home, is always glad to welcome visitors and to tell them of the work of the league and to ask that they co-operate with the management in aiding the suffering animals.

"It won't be long now before residents of Washington begin to go away for the summer," she said. "I wish that all of them could realize that the league stands ready to call and take away cats which these people are leaving behind them. So many poor cats are turned out into the street to fight for a living or to starve to death every summer when the vacation season begins. The league will care for these cats, if notified by the owners, and will try to find them good homes, or will chloroform them if necessary. So much suffering could be prevented merely by calling our phone or dropping us a postal card."

When a reporter for The Star walked into the home of the league, three little dogs barked furiously.

When Miss Coursey came from the back of the house, she explained that the dogs had been brought in during the last few days and that she was seeking to find a home for them. One was a little mother, and her puppies hardly had their eyes open. The owner of the mother dog had been going away and did not know what to do with her, but a friend told her of the Animal Rescue League and it solved the difficulty. There were other dogs in other parts of the home, some of them big and some little, and up on the second floor is a big, sunny room dedicated to the cats. A score of them and half a dozen kittens were walking about or stretching themselves in the sun.

Seeks Home for "Tom."
One enormous white tom cat, Miss Coursey said, had been sent to the home by a woman who was leaving town.

"He is such a fine animal that I am keeping him to see if I cannot get him a good home," she said. With a flying leap a black and white cat landed on Miss Coursey's shoulder from a nearby bench. "They are very friendly," said Miss Coursey, "and they soon learn to know who their friends are. You might think that with such a large number of cats there would be a lot of fighting, but they make very little noise, though sometimes I have to come down to stop a fight."

In the room where the animals are chloroformed Miss Coursey showed the bodies of four little kittens which had been thrown out in an alley to die. The league agent had found them and brought them to the home, where they were humanely put out of the way. "We have no place connected directly with the home where we can care for horses, but we can always hire a stall in a stable nearby," said Miss Coursey. She said that the league was planning to buy up some of the old, diseased and decrepit horses which are sold for a song at auctions here frequently, and which often fall into the hands of persons who try to make them work when all they are fit for is to die.

Miss Coursey brought out a kind of carpet slipper, designed to tie on horses' feet when there is a sudden snow fall and the streets are slippery.

Slippers for Distribution.
"We distributed quite a number of these slippers when there was snow last winter," said Miss Coursey. "They

CONSPIRACY TO AID
WARSHIPS CHARGED

Collector Malone of New York
Would Prevent Supplying of British Cruisers.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Dudley F. Malone, collector of the port, made a final tour of the New York and Hoboken, N. J., waterfronts before daylight today in his effort to prevent violation of the neutrality of this port by an organization which he charges has been formed here to furnish supplies to British cruisers lying off New York.

The trip along the wharves was made in the destroyer MacDougall, one of the naval vessels stationed here to guard the neutrality of the port.

Mr. Malone declared he intended to ask the federal grand jury to take action at once against an organization which, he said, appeared to be engaged in a conspiracy to violate the President's proclamation of neutrality. Evidence of the collector was obtained in a series of secret midnight tours of the waters around New York, on board a destroyer, it is understood, will be submitted to the grand jury. This, together with information obtained by agents of the collector, he asserted, tends to show that a fleet of large tugboats has been sought by the organization, having headquarters in a New York hotel, to carry supplies from various points to the British warships which have been watching the entrance to New York harbor almost since the beginning of the war.

Hopes to Nip Conspiracy.
With the aid of the grand jury, Mr. Malone hoped to break up the alleged conspiracy and prevent the use of New York as a base of supplies for the warships. "The cruisers have not the right to remain at sea beyond the three-mile limit and make a neutral port in this country their base of supplies," he said.

The collector said he knew the names of British warships lying outside the three-mile limit, but he declined to announce them. Their number, he said, varied from two to five.

At Mr. Malone's request, two more destroyers are expected to arrive within a few days to aid in preventing violations of neutrality. His action, he said, was based entirely upon facts discovered by secret service men, and not on complaints lodged by any foreign government.

The collector is proceeding under the provisions of a resolution passed by Congress March 3, empowering the President to direct collectors of ports to refuse clearance to vessels carrying arms, ammunition or supplies to war.

The army transport Sheridan, sailing from Manila April 15, will be the first of government vessels to bring Philippine commerce to the United States under the recent order by President Wilson.

The Philippine government will be the consignee of any merchandise she may bring, and before the cargo is loaded an opportunity will be given commercial liners to take it. Lack of ships on the Pacific on account of the European war has demoralized commerce between Manila and San Francisco.
